Manager's Mic

Construction on our new staff triplex is well underway. I shouldn't be, but I continue to be amazed at the large and small ways God has His hand on this project. From sending the right people with the right skill set at the right time for each stage of the build, to needed materials being available, to neighbors and friends who loan us tools and heavy equipment, to weather appropriate for each day's task this summer is definitely under God's direction. It has not been without a few hiccups and more than a few challenges, but God is good and each day brings us one more day closer to completion.

Thank you to the teams who have come so far and the teams and individuals who are yet to come. Thank you to the many locals who have stopped by to lend a hand - right when we needed it most. And thank you for your continued prayer for this project.

Praise God...

...for good weather, safety in work, and willing workers

...for all those who are giving their time, talent, and resources to come construct our staff triplex this summer.

Pray...

...for safety in travel and work as many come to help build our staff triplex this summer.

...that our weather would be just what is needed for construction.

Summer Fun

Summer volunteers come to work, but they also come to experience Western Alaska. While we do not have soaring mountains or thick forests in Nome., we do have frequent community events, sweeping vistas, and quirky landmarks. Teams took the time this summer to participate in the Midnight Sun Festival and Fourth of July festivities. Others took a dip in the Bering Sea and received a Certificate of Bravery for doing so. A drive out of town is always rewarding whether it is to Salmon Lake looking for musk oxen and moose or along the coast to our National Historic Site, The Last Train to Nowhere. Nome has a wonderful museum and often cultural events coincide with a visit. Some even try their luck at fishing with varying degrees of success.

Teams work hard, but we also encourage anyone who comes to serve to take time to experience the beauty of this place and the people who live here.
